The Beaches

As Guanacaste spans the northwestern corner of Costa Rica, it should come as no surprise that this lively province is home to some of the most beautiful beaches in Costa Rica. For many years, El Jobo had remained relatively undiscovered. This is one of the most beautiful beaches in the province with light cocoa colored sand that is surrounded by green forest covered hillsides. The protective hillsides block most of the wind, making this one of the most desirable beaches in the area.

The Landscape

There are several national parks, reserves and even volcanoes in the El Jobo area. Most of which are included in the World Heritage Site, Area de Conservacion Guanacaste. Within this site are the Junquillal Refuge, Guanacaste National Park and Santa Rosa National Park. Guanacaste National Park is an expansive park located to the west, protecting tropical dry forest and the Orosi Volcano. Santa Rosa National Park is located to the south. This is one of the most important national parks in Costa Rica, protecting the forest, mangroves, and marine habitat. This park is also a primary nesting site for Olive Ridley Sea Turtles, which can nest thousands at a time.

Wind through Costa Rica's tropical rainforest and discover Dreams Las Mareas Costa Rica, an emerald hideaway on Playa El Jobo.
